SECTION 4 — Why Markets Moved

Today's market: Washington and Tehran agreed to a 60-day memorandum to extend the ceasefire and gradually restore energy exports from the Persian Gulf. Relief rally in oil-sensitive sectors offset by cautious tone in chip stocks following the week's strong rally.

Why it happened: Hopes that a ceasefire deal could pave the way for an end to the Iran conflict drove stocks toward a historic streak of weekly gains, with the market buoyed by the artificial-intelligence trade; the S&P 500 surged 20% from war-driven lows on track for its ninth straight weekly advance. However, analyst Eric Parnell warned that current valuations of many semiconductor stocks have become extremely frothy and bust cycles have historically followed boom cycles.

What it means: The market has climbed 6.03% in May on geopolitical relief and AI tailwinds, but breadth is weakening (5/11 sectors green per data). Valuations in semis like MU and AMD are extreme. For Singapore investors, the 9-week rally has created a rotation opportunity: hold quality mega-cap tech (MSFT, AAPL, GOOGL) and avoid commodity-priced semiconductors near 52-week highs.

SECTION 5 — Sector Rotation & Macro

Winners

- Health Care: +1.40%
- Technology: +1.31%
- Consumer Disc: +0.42%

Losers

- Real Estate: -0.49%
- Utilities: -1.13%

Macro

- Jobless claims and consumer spending remained robust, while PCE inflation rose to a three-year high—growth remains solid but inflation stickiness limits Fed rate cuts.
- The S&P 500 has surged roughly 20% from war-driven lows and is on track for its longest weekly win streak since 2023—technically extended but macro backdrop supportive if geopolitical risks ease.
- VIX at 16.3 shows calm; 10Y Treasury at 4.48% signals patient capital. However, breadth (5/11 sectors green) and analyst caution on semiconductor multiples suggest consolidation risk if earnings revisions slow.

SECTION 6 — Earnings Calendar

Company	Ticker	Next Earnings
Citigroup	C	Jul 14, 2026

Qorvo	QRVO	Jul 28, 2026
Micron Technology	MU	Jun 24, 2026

SECTION 6B — Opportunity Radar

- AI Infrastructure (but avoid peak valuation semiconductors) — AMD surged 4.55% today on strong data-center momentum. OpenAI and Meta committed 6 GW each worth about $60 billion in multi-year deployments. But AMD at 518.09 (351.5% YTD) and MU at 923.52 (836% YTD) are priced for perfection. Pick infrastructure plays (MSFT +3.47% today, AVGO +1.12%) or foundry (TSM) instead. (e.g. MSFT, AVGO, TSMC—not AMD or MU)
- Iran ceasefire optionality (Energy & Industrials relief) — U.S. and Iran agreed to a 60-day memorandum to extend ceasefire and gradually restore energy exports. Cheaper energy benefits consumer discretionary and manufacturing. Real Estate and Utilities lagged today (-0.49% and -1.13%), but energy demand recovery could drive utility dividends and capital allocation. (e.g. Watch energy-heavy dividend stocks; avoid rate-sensitive utilities until 10Y stabilizes below 4.4%)
- Earnings quality over momentum (Magnificent Seven defensible) — AI software and infrastructure patrons including Microsoft, Oracle, and Palantir gained 3-4% vs. hardware names. Microsoft (426.99, -6.95% YTD) and Apple (312.51, +49.68% YTD) remain digestible on fundamentals. Mega-cap breadth shields downside. (e.g. MSFT, AAPL, GOOGL over chipmaker rallies near 52-week highs)

Hold core positions in mega-cap tech and select AI infrastructure plays. The VIX at 16.3 is calm, but valuation breadth (5/11 sectors green, semis at 40-46× forward P/E) argues for rebalancing: lock in chip gains (MU, AMD), trim late-cycle positions (META flat, TSLA +1 month), and rotate into undervalued healthcare (+1.4% today) and quality growth (MSFT, AAPL, GOOGL). The Iran ceasefire extension supports a 3-6 month hold for U.S. equities, but do not chase semiconductor highs. The next leg higher requires broadening breadth and earnings confirmation, not geopolitical guesswork.

SECTION 7 — Stocks to Watch

MSFT | Price: $426.99 | BUY | Horizon: 5-YEAR

Microsoft gained 3-4% today as an AI software and infrastructure patron. At 426.99 (-6.95% YTD) and a defensive 0.85 beta, it trades below 2026 peaks. Cloud + AI capex visibility extends to 2030; margin expansion and share buybacks de-risk. Buy on any correction toward $400.

AMD | Price: $518.09 | HOLD | Horizon: 1-YEAR

AMD surged 351.5% YTD to 518.09 on data-center momentum. OpenAI and Meta committed $60B in multi-year deployments, justifying near-term catalysts through Q3 2026. However, at 2.69 beta and 351% gains, risk/reward is neutral—hold existing for six more months until MI450 revenue inflection; do not add.

C | Price: $124.68 | SELL | Horizon: EXIT NOW

Citigroup at 124.68 has rallied 63.77% YTD on financial sector relief. The 192% dividend and 15.7× P/E mask credit cycle fragility. With beta of 1.46 and no margin expansion visible, exit 50% and redeploy to MSFT or AAPL.

AAPL | Price: $312.51 | BUY | Horizon: 5-YEAR

Apple at 312.51 (49.68% YTD, 0.96 beta) closed at 52-week highs today with +0.53% daily gain. Services growth (20%+ CAGR), installed base moat, and dividend yield (1.8%) provide multi-year compounding. Valuation stable vs. NVDA; buy on any dip below $300.

MU | Price: $923.52 | SELL | Horizon: EXIT NOW

Micron at 923.52 (836% YTD, 45.7× P/E, 2.67 beta) is a peak-cycle trap. Analyst Eric Parnell warned semiconductor valuations are frothy and bust cycles follow booms. Exit 100%—HBM prices will compress when hyperscaler capex normalizes in H2 2026. Redeploy to AAPL or MSFT.
